

AMERICA'S SUCCESS BUILT ON INTERDEPENDENCE

The foundation of America's Independence is the great Interdependence of Her People. With the drawing of the 21st Century the people of the United States of America were poised to perform at a level of excellence that highlighted the interdependence of Our People through the diverse nature of these unique peoples contribution to the whole of the America fabric. With the conclusion of the National elections of 2000, it was clear that regardless of gender, ancestry or previous conditions of social status that interdependence was the foundation of America's Independence and World progress.

High lighting the dominant position of The United States of America as the premier nation of the world is the Interdependence of this country's people. Building upon the innate Human Capital of the many peoples that make up the United states of America has provide a unique human laboratory in which the most complex of human experiments has taken place for over 400 years. More than anything else these 400 years have given rise to a continue stream of interdependence that has provided the world with a model for human capital development that is unprecedented in the history of human kind.

This interdependence of American Human Capital has provided unprecedented growth in all sectors of human development in the lives of the American people. The vast resources of a diverse people working interdependently has forged a human frontier that has yielded a culture that honors success, achievement and uniqueness with no regard toward, gender, race, ethnicity or age. Even wealth has to take a back seat to nature of this culture of interdependence.

America has become an Independent Society because of the interdependence of Her people. The merit of your developed human capital has greater importance in the United States then any other single factor. Without question the 21st Century will be the Century of Human Interdependence and the United States of America will be the vanguard nation of this Century leading the world to a level of unprecedented growth and accomplishment. Leadership in America comes from the whole not just the parts.