

Art Fletcher Differs With Muncey On Post

Pasco City Councilman Art Fletcher said Friday the issue between him and Bill Muncey in his campaign for lieutenant governor* is whether the position should be a public relations job or one to implement programs.

"Muncey is suggesting that what is needed is a public relations man," Fletcher said. "I say that is not what is needed."

Fletcher said he would seek to carry out specific duties in the field of urban affairs.

The two will appear jointly on a television program on KING-TV, Seattle, Sept. 8.

Fletcher said the Democratic incumbent, John Cherberg, "is trying to imply that he has been a full-time lieutenant governor." He said he hoped to debate the point with Cherberg after the primary.

Muncey, who has challenged Cherberg to a debate, said he has not heard from him.

Fletcher also said Friday he will meet with Republican presidential nominee Richard Nixon in New York early next month to discuss his ideas on self-help cooperatives similar to the one he helped organize in East Pasco.
