A demonstration

As campus demonstrations go, there was a superb performance out at the Yakima Valley College campus Tuesday when two candidates for state offices spoke to nearly 500 students on "Violence in America."

Slade Gorton, Republican candidate for attorney general, and Art Fletcher, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, were the speakers. Not one hint of a boo or a catcall was evident as the massed students listened politely, then asked questions.

We believe YVC students deserve hearty applause for showing that they are not only ladies and gentlemen, but citizens interested in what any candidate has to say. That's the kind of demonstration that is a joy to watch.
